INTRODUCTION

The roots of Historic Preservation in California are intertwined with the foundation of the State Park System. The last decades of the 19th century saw a movement to preserve redwood groves, recreational sites and places of extraordinary natural beauty. A similar drive to preserve places of historic interest developed about the same time. In 1892, the first historical monument, a statue of James Marshall overlooking his 1848 gold discovery site near Coloma, was formally established. From that time, guided in part by the work of Fredrick Law Olmsted, California's State Parks have attempted to acquire and preserve outstanding examples of the rich and diverse cultural heritage of the state. The Department of Parks and Recreation protects the most diverse cultural heritage holdings of any land managing agency in California. It is a unique agency in state government, being the only one that acquires and protects heritage resources as part of its mission.

Protection and preservation of the heritage resources within the Department's 278 units requires maintaining an Index of these resources by management unit, and an understanding of how they contribute to California's expansive history. To date a combined total of over 13,400 cultural properties have been formally recorded on State Park lands, and many more remain to be documented. They include prehistoric archaeological sites that span nearly 10,000 years and reflect a variety of distinct cultural adaptations of early Californians. Some contain evidence of ancient climate change and paleoenvironmental conditions. Other heritage resources include many outstanding architectural examples, Mission era sites and structures; Chinese, Russian, African American and other ethnic properties; early California and American era resources; mining, ranching and agricultural landscapes; and underwater shipwrecks. All contribute to our understanding of the development of California as we know it today, and all provide us with physical connections to our past. Visitors to state parks can connect with Julia Morgan, Jack London, Will Rogers, Pio Pico, Col. Allen Allensworth, John Marsh, John Bidwell, James Marshall, John Sutter, Bob Hope, Ronald Reagan, William Randolph Hearst, Robert Louis Stevenson, Gen. Mariano Vallejo, Juan Bautista de Anza, Leland Stanford and Alexander Rotchev – to name only a few, through heritage resources.

These precious archaeological sites, buildings and structures, historic landscapes and cultural preserves represent a broad spectrum of California's richly diverse past. Having these "touchstones of history" give today's citizens a sense of place in the modern world. They represent a heritage legacy handed down to us, the stewards of these places.

This Index functions as an important planning tool. It has been created to afford park managers with a handy desk reference to the heritage resources under their stewardship. This should help all DPR staff comply with the Department's mandated directive to identify, inventory, preserve and protect all of its significant historic resources. The first Index was completed in 1985; this 2007 Index represents the eighth revision of that inventory, and identifies all the known cultural resources under

2 Introduction

State Park protection. The Index is frequently expanded and kept current by staff of the Archaeology, History & Museums Division. It can also be accessed online at:

http://www.parks.ca.gov/?page\_id=24425

It should be noted that while this Index has been updated, many historic resources remain to be identified and documented. The survey and inventory of cultural properties is a continual process – as park lands are acquired, new surveys must be initiated. Over time, as our knowledge of history expands and incorporates new themes, ideas and perspectives, heritage resources must be re-surveyed, re-recorded, and re-evaluated. And in some instances, a comprehensive cultural resource survey may simply never have been initiated in an existing park property. It is also important to remember that under PRC 5024, any project that disturbs the ground or affects a historic resource, should be reviewed for cultural resource impacts.

If you have additions or corrections to suggest to the Index, please contact Kelly Long, Assistant State Archaeologist at (916) 653-7985 or klong@parks.ca.gov.

HOW TO USE THIS INDEX

The overall grand total for archaeological sites within the State Park System is 10,271 sites. Also, there are 3,375 historic structures, 123 California Historical Landmarks, 25 National Historic Landmarks, 99 National Register Properties, and 14 Cultural Preserves. State Parks also protects other resources, for example local Points of Interest and Historic American Engineering Record buildings are included in this index. All of these resource designations have been separated out into tables as follow:

Table 1 gives a detailed overview of all recorded cultural resources, both prehistoric and historic, within the California State Park System. The table is organized by District and Park with totals for each. A final grand total is on the last page of the table.

Table 2 lists the recorded archaeological sites within each unit and should be considered a work in progress. This table should be consulted before any ground disturbing activities take place at a unit. If an archaeological site is listed in your park unit, it is important to check the unit's archaeological map for its location before any ground disturbance takes place. If in doubt as to a site location, check with a Cultural Resource Specialist. Remember, this table lists recorded sites: many other prehistoric villages, camps, midden, trails, rock art localities, and historic deposits remain undocumented.

Table 3 lists additional information about our recorded historic buildings and other structures. Again, this list should be considered a work in progress as many historic resources have yet to be surveyed, or resurveyed, in numerous parks. If a resource has a known name it is listed, along with the name of the person who recorded the resource and the date of its recordation. For the most part, these historic resources are recorded on forms DPR 750 or DPR 523. In the future the DPR 523 will serve as the standard form for recordation, as required by the Office of Historic Preservation. . These records are arranged alphabetically by park unit. If a structure is listed on a DPR 750 or DPR 523 these records should be checked before planning maintenance or modification work.

Table 4 lists all California Historical Landmarks located on state park properties. These are sites, buildings, structures, or places that the State Historical Resources Commission deems to be of statewide significance. Statewide there are over 1000 Landmarks. The Department has recorded 119 of these sites on park units. They are arranged alphabetically by park unit. Landmarks #770 and above are automatically listed on the California Register of Historical Resources; such listings afford certain protections under CEQA/5024 review.

Table 5 reflects the number of National Register of Historic Places properties and associated National Historic Landmarks. They include historic buildings and structures and archaeological sites of local, state and national significance. Granting National Historical Landmark status is one of the highest honors our nation affords to cultural resources. The Department has 94 National Register properties, 25 of which have

National Landmark status. These records are arranged alphabetically by park unit, and are maintained by the Department's Central Records. This section is important for park interpretation and maintenance. Maintenance or rehabilitation on National Register properties must meet the Secretary of the Interior's Standards and Guidelines; such projects must undergo Environmental Review in order to prevent negative impacts to these significant resources.

Table 6 lists 14 Cultural Preserves in 9 separate park units. This is the highest level of resource protection afforded for management and interpretation by the Department. Park personnel must have a firm knowledge of the location and boundaries of Cultural Preserves located in their units. This is important because within Cultural Preserves complete integrity of the cultural resources must be maintained.

Table 7 lists the Historic American Engineering Record (HAER) recordation on state park property. HAER was established 1969 as a companion to Historic American Buildings Survey (HABS). HAER was established to document structures of outstanding technological and engineering significance. The Department currently has two HAER properties.

Table 8 contains the Points of Historical Interest located on park property. These are generally historic sites that are not of statewide significance, but do have local importance. Points of Historical Interest are useful for interpretation and the knowledge of location for any future ground disturbance or potential impacts to buildings and structures. Points of Historical Interest designated after December 1997 and recommended by the State Historical Resources Commission are also listed in the California Register. No historical resource may be designated as both a Landmark and a Point. If a Point is subsequently granted status as a Landmark, the Point designation will be retired.

Table 9 contains historical plaques erected by the Clampers vary in size and shape and in style of expressing their message. Over 600 plaques have been placed throughout California and Nevada "to memorialize persons and places whom history and civilization might otherwise have forgotten." This type of recognition is independent of national and state programs, and conveys no special protections or designations.

Table 2. ARCHAEOLOGICAL SITES

Archaeological site survey records are available for all numbered sites that begin with a three letter county abbreviation. The suffix "H" on a site number indicates it is an historic period archaeological site. The suffix "/H" on a site number indicates a dual component site, or both prehistoric and historic components. Those sites that do not have a trinomial assigned are included in this list by their resource name or primary number.

Table 3. HISTORIC BUILDINGS AND STRUCTURES

This Table lists all the recorded survey forms for historic buildings and structures owned or managed by DPR. Units of the State Park System are listed by their official names in alphabetical order. If available, the dates of recordation are included. Most surveys were done using DPR 523 forms, Historic Resource Inventory. A few are on DPR 750 forms, historic Structure Survey. Some structure ruins have been recorded on DPR 422 forms, Archaeological Site Record. In 1970 an unnumbered Historic Building Survey Form was used. This form is no longer available.

A number to the left of a historic resource name indicates the an National Register eligibility determination has been accepted into the centralized statewide inventory of the Office of Historic Preservation, and that OHP staff has concurred with an evaluation of significance by DPR staff. These numbers are a code for National Register eligibility determination's by DPR and OHP staff as follows:

Table 4. CALIFORNIA HISTORICAL LANDMARKS

California Historical Landmarks are evaluated, selected, and designated by the State Historical Resources Commission according to the criteria contained in Subdivision (a) of Section 5031 of the Public Resources Code. To be eligible as an official state historical landmark, a site must be of statewide significance and have anthropological, cultural, military, political, architectural, economic, scientific or technical, religious, experimental, or other values. The standards now in use were first applied in designation of Landmark No. 770 in 1975. The year listed below is the date the State Historical Resources Commission approval.

Many of the earlier California Historical Landmarks (before #400) were supplemented by historical research narratives written by Works Projects Administration (WPA) historians in the late 1930s. California Historical Landmarks do not necessarily have described, mapped, or inferred boundaries. The landmarks below are located wholly or partly in units of the State Park System, though an associated brass plaque may be placed elsewhere.

Table 5. NATIONAL REGISTER OF HISTORIC PLACES

In California, nominations to the National Register of Historic Places are received and evaluated by the State Historical Resources Commission. They are then forwarded to National Register Staff of the National Park Service for approval and listing. The Historic Preservation Act of 1966 provided for an expanded National Register of architectural, historical, archaeological, and cultural sites of local, state, or national significance.

National Historical Landmarks are approved by the National Park Service to recognize nationally significant sites, buildings, and objects that illustrate or commemorate the history of the United States. There are 25 National Historical Landmarks within units of the State Park System, as indicated by the L symbol on the list below. All National Historical Landmarks are automatically included on the National Register.

Table 6. CULTURAL PRESERVES

Cultural Preserves consist of distinct and outstanding areas of cultural interest that have established boundaries within State Park Units. This is the highest level of resource protection afforded for management and interpretation by the Department. The Department has fourteen Cultural Preserves approved by the California State Park and Recreation Commission. All Park Managers and Resource Specialists need to be aware of the existence and location of Cultural Preserves within their units.

Table 8. POINTS OF INTEREST

The Point of Historical Interest Program was initiated in 1965 to enable the State of California to officially recognize places of local interest that do not qualify for State Historical Landmark registration. Applications are reviewed by the appropriate County Board of Supervisors for endorsement, and then reviewed and registered by the State Historical Resources Commission and the Department of Parks and Recreation. The point numbers should not be confused with archeological site numbers (trinomials), which also begin with three-letter county designations.

Table 9. E CLAMPUS VITUS (CLAMPERS) PLAQUES

Historical plaques erected by the Clampers vary in size and shape and in style of expressing their message. Over 600 plaques have been placed throughout California and Nevada "to memorialize persons and places whom history and civilization might otherwise have forgotten."

Clamper plaques are included in this index as a type of locally recognized historical resource in the broadest, public sense. This type of recognition is independent of national and state programs, and conveys no special protections or designations.

The primary source of information for this list is E Clampus Vitus Plaques by Kenneth M. Castro and Eugene L. Fambrini, 1995. E Clampus Vitus is a private charitable organization dedicated to the recognition and celebration of Western history. The Clampers have also raised funds and donated labor for Erecting many bronze plaques for California Registered Historical Landmarks.
